Requests for extension shall be sent to Benidictor Muhwezi (benidictmak@gmail.com) and examined on a case-by-case basis. Publishing Ethics of African Health Sciences takes publishing ethics very seriously and thoroughly investigates any concerns or allegations of misconduct reported to the Journal. Complaints must be emailed to the editor-in-chief, Professor James K Tumwine (kabaleimc@gmail.com). Plagiarism Condition of submission is that the work of the author's own; all the authors listed approve the manuscript submitted; the work must be original; and the manuscript is not taken into account for publication in another journal. To ensure the authenticity of this article, Google Scholar can use text search and other literature checks to verify similarities to previously published works. Concerns about possible plagiarism will be investigated accordingly and this may lead to the rejection or withdrawal of the manuscript or article. Peer Review This page operates a double-blind peer review policy. The submitted manuscripts will first be evaluated by the editor-in-chief to ensure that they are appropriate for the diary. Documents deemed appropriate shall then normally be sent to at least two independent experts for an assessment of the scientific quality of the study. Reports on peer review shall be shared with the author. The editor-in-chief is responsible for accepting or rejecting articles, as well as for co-editors. The editor's decision is final. In 2018, the average decision time, including papers sent during the peer review process, was 132 days. Conflicts of interest in peer review african health sciences want their peer reviewers to disclose all possible situations, which can be seen as conflicts of interest. In order to avoid doubt, all checkers should specify whether there is a conflict or not. We expect inspectors not to use the work they have done for other purposes. Open Access All articles published in this journal are displayed in open access format. This means that and will be permanently free for everyone to read, download, copy and user license). It is freely readable as a fully open log. It is also free for authors to publish (no article publishing fee (APC)).
